Overview

The global number of COVID-19 cases continue to increase, exceeding 8 million cases (8,061,550 cases) with more than 430,500 deaths reported as of 18th June 2020, as per the World Health Organization (WHO). The WHO notes that in the last two months, there has been an increase of 6 million cases from the initial 85,000 cases reported in the first two months of declaring the COVID-19 a global pandemic. Resultantly, Governments and authorities, to curb the spread of COVID-19, continue to apply and manage travel restrictions and measures in disparate ways. As of 18th June 2020, a total of 221 countries, territories or areas have issued 66,610 travel restrictions, indicating almost no change from 66,473 restrictions recorded on 15th June 2020. However, there has been an increase of four per cent in medical requirements for travel and a simultaneous decrease of almost one percent in restrictions on passengers arriving from specific countries, territories or areas. In parallel to existing travel restrictions, a total of 178 countries, territories or areas have issued 692 exceptions enabling mobility despite blanket travel restrictions. Between 15th and 18th June 2020, 8 countries, territories or areas have issued new exceptions and an equal number of countries, territories or areas have removed exceptions. Most Commonly Imposed Restriction Types

As of 18th June 2020, 221 C/T/As have imposed restrictions. Despite the stabilisation, entry restrictions for passengers from restricted C/T/As still had the highest share of the total restrictions (67%). Closure of borders has been a common and preferred response, followed by medical measures making up 22 per cent of the restrictions. Changes in visa requirements and entry restrictions for certain nationalities have also followed a stable trend, continuing to represent a small share (1% and <1% respectively) in total restrictions.
